Beschreibung

„Blade Runner“, der Film von Ridley Scott, beruht auf dem Roman von Philip K. Dick aus dem Jahr 1968, in dem Androiden von elektrischen Schafen träumen. Denn in der postapokalyptischen Gesellschaft definiert der Besitz von Tieren den Status und eine Person im Fernseher wird beinahe göttlich verehrt. Vom Mars zurückgekehrte Androiden bedrohen aber die radioaktive Idylle, und ein Kopfgeldjäger – im Film Harrison Ford – macht Jagd auf sie. Mit höhnischem Scharfsinn und schwarzem Humor erkundet Dick die Grenze, die den Menschen von den Androiden, die er geschaffen hat, unterscheidet. Eine Lektion in Sachen Ethik der Technik.

„Philip K. Dick ist für die zweite Hälfte des 20. Jahrhunderts, was Franz Kafka für die erste war.“ Art Spiegelman
