Ernst Ludwig Kirchner was a German painter, sculptor and engraver. He is considered one of the fathers of Expressionism, a 20th-century artistic movement that broke away from traditional rules and sought to portray man's emotional tensions and psychological burdens. Kirchner was born in Aschaffenburg, Bavaria in 1880.

He was a major figure of Expressionism but not only, as demonstrated by the MAPFRE Foundation with about 153 works by Ernst Kirchner, highlighting in particular the last twenty years of his production, spent mainly in Switzerland. Assembled from all over the world, these loans were made possible despite the many.
