Set in the grim, dark future of Warhammer 40,000 'Eisenhorn':

I was recently on a seminar panel talking about the Xenos – the myriad species of the Warhammer 40,000 galaxy. A good number of my novels and stories deal directly with or touch upon the Xenos and the seminar really got me thinking about these races. From an author's point of view, any of these races can be.

But, with Xenos, I've done just that: gone back and reread a book I first read six or seven years ago. And it was great. Xenos was the very first novel I read set in the Warhammer 40k universe. If you don't know it, it's a universe set up explicitly so that wargamers moving little plastic figures, often exquisitely painted, can play.

I love 40k but I feel like in the universe there should be more Alien threats or special units that games workshop could introduce playing similar to the dogs of war that was in fantasy and I feel games workshop could do this and they could be introduced as support units for armies , I mean GW already do Sylph, Snake like.
